SANTA MONICA,
CALIF.AMONG KILLED IS KENNETH
HAWKS, DIRECTOR HUSBAND OF MARY ASTOR

Santa Monica, Calif., Jan. 3.—(U.P.)—Filming of a motion picture, with its climax modeled on the death at sea of Captain Alfred Lowenstein, the Belgian multi-millionaire, took ten lives in the Pacific ocean off here late yesterday.

Just as the screen party was preparing to shoot the scene in which Lowenstein dropped mysteriously from his airplane into the English Channel, two of the three planes used in the action crashed in mid-air and carried all hands to death.

Three bodies were recovered shortly after the tragic collision and a gigantic search to find the missing, including Kenneth Hawks, director-husband of Mary Astor, one of the screen's most beautiful actresses, was underway today.

Coast guard cutters, speedboats, planes and a blimp hovered over the point where the two ships plunged into the water.

In addition to Hawks, those missing were: George Eastman, cameraman; Otto Jordan, assistant cameraman; Paul Rous and Ross Cook, pilots; and Tom Harris and Hank Johanness, prop boys.

Those bodies recovered were thrown clear of the planes as they fell. They were Max Gold, assistant director; Conrad Wells, cameraman, and Ben Frankel, assistant cameraman.

The party, headed by Hawks, an aviator and a prominent film colony figure, was about to take the final shot of the picture starring Warner Baxter. The latter was not in the party.

Two of the motion picture planes carried the directors and the cameramen. The third held a parachute jumper who was to be filmed as he fell to the water.

Eye witnesses said one of the two camera planes suddenly side-slipped into the other.

There was a crunch as the wings struck and struts gave way and then an explosion.

The two planes, locked together, fell in flames 3,000 feet to the water. Three men either were thrown or jumped from the ships as they fell.

A lone burning wing tip stayed above water for a minute and then went under. Presumably the seven men still aboard went to the bottom tangled in the wreckage.

Captain Roscoe Turner, one-time holder of the trans-continental speed record, believed the men were dead before they struck. Turner piloted the plane carrying the parachute jumper.

"I didn't see the actual crash," Turner said. "When I looked back the planes were locked and afire. Nobody could have lived in that crash."

Hoot Gibson, one of the few licensed pilots in the film colony, saw the collision from the beach.

"I think the pilots must have been blinded by the sun," he said. "I saw them touch wing tips and then swing into each other. The explosion was terrific and flames engulfed both ships in a second."

Miss Astor was in a state of collapse today.

At the time the crash occurred she was on the stage at the Majestic theater, going through a matinee performance of a play in which she was starred. She was not told of the accident until after the show was over.

Hawks and Miss Astor were married here three years ago.

(As told to the United Press)

Santa Monica, Calif., Jan. 3.—The ten men who perished when two motion picture planes collided and plunged into the Pacific ocean late yesterday probably were dead before the ships struck the water.

I was in a third plane, carrying the parachute jumper whose leap those aboard the two ill-fated ships were to photograph.

The two were about 500 feet ahead of me, 200 and 300 feet higher. Suddenly one of them must have come up under the other. There was a terrific explosion, and then black smoke. They hovered in space, then plunged toward the sea.

The doors had been removed from the two camera ships. A man, probably a photographer placed to film from the doorway, hurtled out of the cabin and into the water.

The two planes were in flames as they dropped. The covering was burned off before they hit the water and I do not believe that those men aboard were alive when the planes touched water.

It was an unexplainable accident. The pilots were capable. I can't imagine what happened.

No one in those two planes had a chance. None wore parachutes.

Santa Monica, Calif., Jan. 3.—The search for seven of the ten men who lost their lives yesterday while attempting to shoot scenes designed to thrill movie audiences continued here today with little hopes of success. Every manner of air and water

BILLY HOWARD, AGE
THREE, IS NATION'S YOUNGEST SMOKER

Denver, Colo., Jan. 3.—(U.P.)—Billy Howard, the nation's youngest smoker, so far has kept his New Year's resolution.

Billy, who is three years old, resolved not to smoke during 1930. For two years he has smoked—preferably a corn-cob pipe.

It was the family physician who started Billy smoking. The lad suffered from insomnia. The physician said tobacco might cure him. It did.

Billy is not certain he can keep his resolution, but he's going to try.

DAMAGEDOTHER 2 PLANES DID NOT TRY
FLYING BECAUSE OF WEATH-ER CONDITIONS

Nome, Alaska, Jan. 3.—(U.P.)—One Eielson rescue expedition had met today with a temporary setback.

In attempting to take-off from Fairbanks for Nome, one of the Fairchild monoplanes of the Canadian rescue unit ground looped on the flying field and was damaged.

The name of the pilot, who was not seriously hurt, was not learned. This expedition is in charge of Capt. Pat Reid.

The other two planes, brought from Seattle on a coast guard cutter, were held at Fairbanks, and did not attempt a take-off because of weather conditions.

Frank Dorbrandt, Alaska Airways pilot, and "buddy" of the missing airman, Carl Ben Eielson, has recently suffered a nervous breakdown, believed to have been caused by the strain of worry over his comrade's fate, and he has been relieved from duty. He will fly to Fairbanks from here, abandoning all thought of a solo rescue flight.

Word from the trading ship Nanuk said that the plane of Harold Gillam, which received a damaged landing gear a week ago, had been repaired, and was now in shape to resume searching flights.

A Russian expedition was quartered at Petropavlovsk, awaiting the end of the Arctic winter to add its two Junkers planes to the steadily increasing list of searchers for Eielson and his mechanic, Earl Borland, now seven weeks missing near North Cape.

U. S. SARATOGA

San Pedro, Calif., Jan. 3.—(U.P.)—Two navy seamen were missing and three others were seriously injured as the result of an explosion aboard a launch which lay at the side of the airplane carrier U. S. Saratoga in the harbor here.

The launch was refueling alongside the Saratoga when waves forced it to scrape along the hull of the airplane carrier. Sparks produced by the contact were carried to the gas tank of the launch, causing the explosion.

A part of the gig was thrown so high that it landed on top of the big ship's smokestack. Flames swept up the side of the Saratoga, but were controlled after they had ignited paint and caused dense clouds of black smoke.

The missing men were Mathew La Vieille, ss, seaman, second class, and Vincent Laler, 29, engineman, second class.

craft hovered over the spot two miles out to sea where two camera planes disappeared with seven men aboard after crashing spectacularly in mid-air and hurtling 4,000 feet into the ocean, but there was no word forthcoming from them.

The depth of the water at the point where the ships struck and the very nature of the crash made recovery of the bodies, including that of Kenneth Hawks, movie director and husband of Mary Astor, improbable, it was said.

SEES PROTESTS OF
MANY CITIZENSDISSATISFACTION IS EXPRESSED WITH ADMINISTRATION OF
PROHIBITION LAWBELIEF THAT SLAYING OF 3 RUM
RUNNERS BY COAST GUARD WAS A "MASSACRE"

Boston, Jan. 3.—(U.P.)—Boston Common, historic park which slopes down to the business district from staid old Beacon Hill, had today witnessed another demonstration by citizens rising to protest against what they considered injustice.

Compared with other scenes in days harking back to the rebellion of the colonies, it was perhaps just an incident. But it was an incident regarded here as highly indicative of Boston's dissatisfaction with the administration of the prohibition law and in particular of its belief that the slaying of three rum-runners by coast guards off Newport, R. I., last Sunday was a "massacre."

Recruiting posters placed on the Common by the coast guard were torn down and trampled by an angry crowd. The colored placards portraying the adventurous life at sea were ripped from their frames and torn to bits. Then the metal frames themselves were twisted apart, and kicked about the sidewalks.

Petty Officer George Briggs, in charge of the recruiting stand, was himself attacked as he tried to protect his post. He escaped in a taxicab with some of the debris of the posters as the crowd shouted at him that the coast guards were "murderers."

Coast guard officials termed the crowd's action "an insult to the American flag." A squad of police reserves were summoned to the Common but no arrests were made.

The near riot followed a mass meeting yesterday in old Faneuil Hall. There the ancient rafters of the "Cradle of American Liberty" resounded to fiery denunciations of the slayings and a resolution was passed calling on President Hoover to make a thorough and impartial investigation of the Newport affair.

William H. Mitchell, chairman of the meeting, recalled that on March 5, 1770, a man was killed a stone's throw away under the guise of government authority.

"The Boston redcoats had full warrant under the law to order the slay-

Berlin, Jan. 3.—(U.P.)—Forty children are dead and fifty are in hospitals at Hammerstein in East Prussia, from an epidemic of measles. The disease is now said to be under control.

ing of Crispus Attacks," he said. "Three men were done to death in Newport harbor last Sunday morning under the guise of authority."

"A navigation paper in the last few days printed a list of 1,100 done to death throughout the country under similar conditions. When stark, wholesale murder stalks abroad under the protection of any law, in God's name repeal that law. Champions of justice were never needed more than now."

Conrad W. Crocker, general counsel for the Liberal Civic League, branded Boatswain Cornell, who was in charge of the coast guard craft that fired on the Black Duck, as a "miserable skunk."

"We are not here to defend rum-runners," Representative John J. Douglass declared. "We are here in protest against the action of a federal department attempting to enforce an unenforceable law. We are here to enforce the command of God, 'Thou shalt not kill.'"

Former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald termed the shootings "murderous" and continued:

"Those three men were bringing in liquor for New Year's Eve celebrations. They knew it would be consumed by governors of states, mayors of cities, selectmen of towns, judges of the supreme court—in fact by public officials everywhere."

"The coast guardsmen had no more right to shoot those men than would Boston police officers have to go into hotel dining rooms and shoot persons drinking at the tables."

Senator Metcalf of Rhode Island charged in a telegram read at the meeting that the bodies of the victims were robbed of money and jewelry.

ABLE FUNDS

St. Paul, Jan. 3.—(U.P.)—Another step toward creation of the new national guard camp near Little Falls was taken today when Adjutant General E. A. Walsh was granted authority to construct a bridge over the Mississippi river between the proposed cantonment and highway No. 27.

General Walsh, confronted with the problem of transportation between the Northern Pacific tracks, the highway and the camp, has asked Attorney General Henry N. Benson if the adjutant's office had the right to build such a bridge out of available funds and was informed it had such rights.

The attorney general also ruled that if such a bridge were built the railway could be permitted to extend its tracks over the river upon it for the purpose of transportation.

DAMAGES OF $5,800
HELD NOT EXCESSIVE

St. Paul, Jan. 3.—(U.P.)—Clifford Brown, 20, of St. Louis county was assessed $5,800 damages for injuries sustained July 14, 1928, in a motorcycle-automobile crash, when the state supreme court today denied the appeal of Luther Knutsen for a judgment of a new trial.

The youth was awarded that amount by a St. Louis county district court jury and the high court ruled it was "not too much" for a person who must go through life a cripple because of the accident.

The denial of a judgment or new trial upheld similar action by Judge C. R. Magne.

CONSOLIDATIONCHAIRMAN OF STATE RAIL AND WAREHOUSE COMMISSION
IN STATEMENTO. P. B. JACOBSON SAYS ELIMIN-ATION OF COMPETITION WOULD CAUSE DETERIORATION

St. Paul, Jan. 3.—(U.P.)—Minnesota will fight the proposed consolidation of northwest railroads, recommended by the interstate commerce commission, O. P. B. Jacobson, chairman of the state railroad and warehouse commission, announced today.

"The Minnesota commission most assuredly cannot signify any agreement in any of the combinations suggested in the report of the I. C. C.," Jacobson said, as he pointed out that active competition between the lines would be eliminated.

"With the exception of competition there would be little left to expect except the deterioration of the really great service furnished by the carriers through the towns and villages which donated money to the railroads for the sole purpose of encouraging the building of a second line where but one had operated."

"These municipalities would find that they had spent their money for a purpose which had been set aside by the consolidation, and they would be back again, in a traffic sense at least, where they were when there was but one road in the state."

Jacobson said he could not understand why the I. C. C. grouped together widely scattered roads and declared "neither is it understandable how the commission could compel the Great Northern and Northern Pacific lines to sell their 50-50 interest in the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy to some outsider."

In its report issued recently the federal commission recommended a merger of the two Northerners after they first had disposed of the Burlington now jointly owned by stockholders of the two lines.

St. Paul, Jan. 3.—(U.P.)—Still baffled by the ax-murder of Private Ira S. Jones in his Fort Snelling tailor shop on New Year's Eve, military and civil police continued to check today on all angles of the case.

"The search is concentrated on all former members of H Company, Third Infantry, of which Jones was a member," Capt. Glen Townsend said, "including two men who figured in the robbery of the tailor shop some two years ago, one of whom is alleged to have threatened Jones because the tailor testified in court against him."

Funeral services for the soldier, who was beaten to death robbed of approximately $30, in the company barracks, were held at the fort today. The body later will be given a military escort to Donithon, Mo., the home of Jones' mother.

WILL OPPOSE
BIG NAVY CAUSE
IN AMERICARENEWAL OF ACTIVITIES BY
SHEARER AND OTHER PROPAGANDISTS IS STARTINGTHEY ARE LIKELY TO CONTINUE THROUGH PERIOD OF THE
LONDON MEETINGBy RAYMOND CLAPPER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Jan. 3.—Assurance can be given from the most reliable sources that the United States is going into the London conference moved by a strong desire to reduce naval armament at the expense of alienating if necessary "big navy" sentiment in this country.

Renewal of activities by William F. Shearer and other propagandists is starting. They are likely to continue throughout the London meeting. President Hoover and Secretary of State Stimson have been subjected to pressure here.

Thus far they have refused to yield and it is learned there is no intention of doing so.

Support for the administration came from an important democratic source today when Rep. McClintock, member of the house naval affairs committee, commended the course of President Hoover in emphasizing civilian influence in the naval negotiations.

"President Hoover is to be warmly congratulated for appointing members of the commission that represent the American people rather than the officers of the United States navy," he said, commenting upon the defense this week of Shearer by Rear Admiral Bradley Fiske, retired.

"Admiral Fiske, through the press, accuses President Hoover of making a mistake because no naval officers were appointed as a member of the United States delegation to the naval conference and when asked concerning advisers he exclaimed, 'Advisers, hell, they won't take advice from anybody!'" McClintock said.

President Hoover has defended his determined policy of seeking naval reduction by declaring that the United States is spending more for military purposes than the most highly militarized nation of the world. Secretary Stimson has repeatedly stressed the heavy cost of modern navies, pointing out that a 10,000-ton cruiser costs double the original cost of the library of congress. The administration emphasizes that the big program contemplated by this government should naval reduction fail, would cost $1,170,000,000 plus cost of operation.

These figures are constantly in President Hoover's mind. The thought of what this money could do if turned into constructive peacetime activities is constantly before him. It is this consideration, as much as any other, which stiffens his determination to leave nothing undone at London to persuade the chief naval powers to co-operate in ending the cruiser-submarine building race now under way and in extending the battleship holiday begun at the Washington conference in 1921.

APPLETON, WIS., GIRL

Appleton, Wis., Jan. 3.—(U.P.)—Lydia Ossman has had the novel experience of being sat on by a cow. She suffered little from her experience.

Lydia suffered most from fright.

VICTIMS OF AUTO
TRAFFIC INCREASE
IN YEAR OF 1929By United Press
Death, unbidden companion of America on the move, claimed approximately five and one-half per cent more victims in automobile traffic accidents during 1929 than in the preceding year, a survey of 32 representative cities disclosed today.

In only eight of the cities were fewer fatalities from such accidents recorded. Increases in the other 24 ranged from about two per cent at Detroit to almost 70 per cent at Berkeley, Calif.

Total auto accident death toll for the 32 cities, including each major centers as New York, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland and St. Louis, was 5,062 for 1929 and 4,825 for 1928. The increase, 237, is 5.33 per cent.

New York, the largest city in the nation, led in the number killed, with 1,282 during the year just concluded, as compared with 1,040 in 1928.

Coast Guard Guns Kill 3 on Rum Ship

Three more victims of the prohibition war are dead at Newport, R. I. The shooting climaxed what was described as the most comprehensive drive of the Coast Guards in years against rum runners. Left to right: John Conant, of Fairhaven; Jake Wiseman, of Providence, of the rum-running speed boat Black Duck, who were killed with Dudley A. Brandt, marine engineer of Dorchester, Mass., by machine gun fire from the U. S. Coast Guard Patrol Boat No. 290 in Newport Harbor.

"Lucky Star" Outstanding Gaynor-Farrell Production

"Lucky Star," the latest and third picture made by that matchless trio, Janet Gaynor with Charles Farrell under Frank Borzage's direction is perhaps the best. Those who wish to differ with our humble notion should lose no time in getting to the Paramount on Saturday and we feel certain that they will be of the same mind.

This trio, we recall, made "7th Heaven" and "Street Angel" two of the big pictures of the past season, and now we insist that "Lucky Star" makes it a trio of successes of the first order. Photographically this Fox picture has a rare beauty which gives the production a quality seldom achieved. Add this to the fact that the story is one of those human documents—a slice out of life as it were with enough romance to satisfy any and all tastes.

Boys to Learn Home Arts

The schools of the future, according to a New York educator, will teach boys as well as girls such arts as arrangement and care of the home and adequate care of children.

"The Cocoanuts"

Harpo, one of the four hilarious Marx Brothers, who is to be seen with his brothers in Paramount's all-talking and singing screen version of their famous New York musical comedy success, "The Cocoanuts," oddly enough, makes his debut in talking pictures without ever speaking one word.

But when Harpo takes his place by his harp and plays the rich, tuneful music for which he is so well known, he literally stops the show.

Chico, another of the four, combines his antics with a comic technique at the piano. He uses his fingers in a manner that is sure to delight audiences everywhere.

It is Groucho, however, whom many consider to be the funniest of all. "The Cocoanuts" shows at the Paramount last time tonight.

Coast Guard Chief Warns Rum Smugglers

A blunt statement that the Coast Guard "means business and cannot stop smuggling of liquor with soft words and amiable gestures" was made by Rear Admiral Frederick C. Billard, the Coast Guard commandant, upon being informed that three men had met death at the hands of his service while attempting to run liquor into Narragansett Bay. (International Newsreel)

Sues for Alienation of Affection

Miss Antoinette Cogno Dicesare, 18, bride of two weeks, and wife of Albert Dicesare, of Malden, is suing her parents-in-law for $20,000, charging alienation of affections. The couple were wed in Hartford, Conn., after they had eloped to be married. The groom's parents make their home in Quincy, Mass. (International Newsreel)

Magnification

Natural scientists tell us that the familiar buck shot if magnified 10,000, 000,000 times would be as large as the earth; and that an atom magnified 10,000,000,000 times would be less than three feet in diameter.

Shut Out Temptation

If a man instantly turned his ears and mind away, the assault would be easily repulsed; but as soon as he opens his ears so far as to dwell upon and daily with temptation, he is at ready well-nigh conquered, and the strife is at the hardest.—John Tauler

Mythological

The nine muses were the mythical daughters of Jupiter and Mnemosyne, goddess of memory, and presided over the arts and sciences as follows: Calliope, epic poetry and rhetoric; Clio, history; Erato, love poetry; Thalia, festivals and comedy; Melpomene, tragic poetry; Terpsichore, dancing; Euterpe, instrumental music; Polyhymnia, singing and rhetoric; Urania, astronomy.

Wide Range of Coast Guard Activity

THE annual report of the United States Coast Guard impresses the reader with the wide range of Coast Guard activities, and the perils incurred in the course of duty and the value to the public in the protection of life and property.

The report, as considered by many, is an argument, too, favoring the efforts now being made for more adequate pay for not only the Coast Guard but also the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Public Health Service and Coast and Geodetic Survey.

Reading the news reports of Coast Guard work in capturing rum runners and their cargoes, some laymen gain the idea that that is the sum total of Coast Guard work. But here are some of the principal operations of the Coast Guard during the last fiscal year:

Lives saved or persons rescued from peril, 4,375; persons on board vessels assisted, 18,725; persons in distress, cared for, 879; vessels boarded or papers examined, 80,263; vessels seized or reported for violations of law, 2,571; fines and penalties incurred by vessels reported, $424,725; regattas and marine parades patrolled, 104; instances of lives saved and vessels assisted, 4,419; instances of miscellaneous assistance, 4,867; derelicts and other obstructions to navigation removed or destroyed, 267; value of derelicts recovered and delivered to owners, $38,200; value of vessels assisted, including cargoes, $49,128,375; persons examined for certificates as lifeboat men, 4,721.

An example of long distance rescue work occurred when the Coast Guard cutter Mojave steamed out of Boston harbor and picked up the rudderless freighter West Hika in a howling storm and towed the crippled steamship 500 miles to port after a week of splendid seamanship. This was a Coast Guard job, freely tendered, without charge. Had the West Hika been a salvage prize, it would have cost her $20,000.

Among the "odd jobs" done by the Coast Guard are warning vessels in danger, furnishing food, fuel and water to vessels in distress, succoring the shipwrecked, medical and surgical aid, assistance at fires, fighting forest fires, helping in floods and other calamities, burial of bodies cast up by the sea, sheltering wayfarers from storms, restoring lost children, helping to maintain order, arresting lawbreakers, recovering lost and stolen property, and a few other things.

A Coast Guard is as busy as the Old Lady who lived in a Shoe attending to his manifold duties. Not the least trouble he has to face is the criticism, sometimes of the most violent sort, levelled at him when he obeys the orders of superiors in attempting to check illicit rum traffic.

Hints for Cage Crowds

Now that the basketball season is under way in Brainerd and the school games will be housed in a wonderful, new, adequate gymnasium, it is incumbent on the customers to exercise real sportsmanship.

Umpire baiting is allowable at baseball games, but not at the high school basketball games. At the high school games unsportsmanlike attitude of a crowd, such as "ragging" the referee, etc., may, and undoubtedly will, bring about the penalizing of the home team.

The utmost quiet should prevail when a player makes a free throw. There can be cheering, of course, and lots of noise, but it must be packed in the right places.

There should be no smoking at any of these games. Smoke vitiates the air and makes it hard for the player. Travel the eastern states and you will find smoking barred in public halls. There it is part of the fire ordinance of large cities.

Another thing to remember. We have a fine gymnasium. See that it is kept so and not thoughtlessly marred. That includes preservation of the floor, fixtures, seats, etc.

Santa Claus Has Lieutenant

SANTA CLAUS this year had a most able lieutenant in the shape of H. H. Broach of New York City, who remembered all the kiddies in Pequot. The Broaches have a wonderful summer home on the shore of Lake Sibley just around the corner from Pequot, where beautiful log work and cobblestone masonry, artistic landscaping and planning have made one of the most palatial homes in the lake region.

Mr. Broach had Santa Claus distribute boxes of candy, big red apples and luscious oranges to the children of Pequot and the Broach family with Santa Claus are now securely enshrined in the hearts of close to 400 kiddies in Pequot.

Honors and great responsibilities have come to Mr. Broach during the year. So well has he administered affairs of the electrical workers in the New York metropolitan area that he has been elected to the presidency of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers which has 150,000 members in the United States and Canada.

Veteran Miner Retires

G. A. ANDERSON, superintendent of the Croft mine at Crosby, this week closed a 50 year career and has retired on a pension. Since 1880 Mr. Anderson has been active in mining, starting as a common laborer in an open pit and through his own initiative and ability advanced step by step until he was a superintendent with many men under his control and direction. He has worked on the ranges in Michigan, Wisconsin, New Mexico, Arizona and Minnesota.

He did the pioneer shaft work on the Kennedy mine, first producer of the Cuyuna range at Cuyuna. He was active here until the mine closed and was then transferred to the Meacham and later the Croft.

CHILDREN are great souvenir and calendar collectors. Who does not remember the old days when stamp collections often vied in popularity with collections of tobacco tags.

CARELESSNESS of smokers in St. Paul caused one of the big fire losses of the year.

A MILD winter such as we are experiencing will be "easy" on the coal bill.

"STORM-TOSSED"

BY HELEN SCHERMERHORN YOUNG

ENID MONROE, young and pretty, has been loved since school days by Ned Grier and Dick Grant, boyhood chums. She favors Dick. After college, the two boys get jobs with an oil company. Ned is sent to Oklahoma while Dick leaves for Shanghai. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.)

CHAPTER VII.

ENID in Paris! Dick was counting the days until that time. As the Leviathan ploughed her way across the ocean he regretted that he hadn't booked on the record-breaking Mauretania. The trip seemed weeks long.

Cher!—Dick was in a fury of delight as he boarded the train for Paris. He thought the old thing would never start.

Paris! He had only three days before he must sail from Marseilles on his voyage to the Orient. He couldn't waste a minute.

His first thought, after tipping the long-mustached porter who carried his luggage up to his room, was the telephone.

There he struggled and struggled to get the number of Enid's school. Then, after fifteen minutes of fruitless effort, he banged the instrument up on the hook, grabbed his hat and dashed downstairs and into a taxi.

It seemed a long while before the concierge came to the door of the tall building with its big wooden door and shining brass knob, and even longer in the austere salon where Dick waited for the principal.

Would that principal ever come? Finally, however, the splendid Frenchwoman who presided over Enid's school entered the room.

Ah, a friend of the sweet Mademoiselle Monroe—how delectable! She had just left the day before with her mother for the holiday. Was it San Moritz or the south of France? She did not know. They would be away a month.

The Christmas holiday—they must have left before his cable arrived. He had thought to spend Christmas with them, Christmas with Enid. What a disappointment! It was poor consolation to reflect that there would be many Christmases he would spend with her some day—some day. But that was not this Christmas.

Bowing over the French lady's hand, he took his leave. Her romantic French heart sympathized with him as only a French heart can, in affaires de coeur. For Dick's dark eyes could not conceal his depression. As he went through the door and down the stairs to the street his heart felt like a big, heavy stone.

For he was going away from her—around the world. It would be months, long months, before he could see Enid again; and how many things could happen in that time?

After the concierge closed the door on Dick, he stood for a moment on the pavement in front of the big house. Looking back at the door he thought of Enid coming in and going out of that door. Enid—when would he see her?

He crossed over to the Arc de Triomphe and paused for a moment with his hat in his hand by the tomb of the Unknown Soldier with its flame burning day and night—the fire which never dies down, that flame which will burn on and on through the years, like the flame in his heart, his love for Enid. Down the Avenue de Bois he walked and into the Champs Elysees, the Place de la Concorde. He was glad he had never seen the magnificent statues of Alsace and Lorraine when they were draped in mourning. For a moment he stood in front of the Crillon Hotel and then went in and up to his room.

What would he do that evening? He didn't want to spend it alone. Bill Everett—he'd call up Bill Everett, who was on duty at the American Embassy. Dick hadn't seen him for years. They had grown up together in Pequot.

Again he struggled with the phone, but finally reached Everett. "Hello, Dick Grant; great to see you. How about dinner tonight? Sure—no, not a thing in the world. I'll be around for you at eight o'clock."

Dick was busy all through the afternoon, and it was not until dressing time that his disappointment weighed in his heart again. "We'll go around to Footit's Bar for a cocktail first," suggested Bill. "You know Mrs. Footit is the widow of the famous English clown. I suppose he made more people laugh than anyone in the world. Yet Mrs. Footit told me that he was a very silent and serious man, whose one amusement was playing cards."

They stood against the rail of Mrs. Footit's Bar. She called her customers her "clients," and served them drinks with the air of a duchess.

"Great character," said Bill as they left. "Wouldn't you think, from those pictures of Footit in his clown suit, that he would be funny all the time?"

"Lots of us have to play parts sometimes," laughed Dick. He was playing a part that very minute—going out for a night in Paris when he had no more interest in it than he had in a night in Hoboken.

"I've reserved a table at Ciro's. We'll dine there."

At Ciro's Bill ordered. "There's the Maharajah of Kapurtakah—over there at the big table," said Bill.

"One of the richest men in the world."

Those are his sons with him. Comes every year all the way from India. There's one of the Greek princes, too. Fine fellows."

The American jazz band played. Dick watched the dancers, but the music made him homesick. How different it would have been if he could have brought Enid with him!

"Might as well move on now," Bill Everett said, calling for the check. "Let's take a look at the Acacias. The Dolly Sisters are dancing there and making a great success."

More American jazz at the Acacias, more pretty women, beautiful dresses, jewels. Everett ordered more champagne. They watched the dancers, many of whom they had seen at Ciro's.

One o'clock.

"Montmartre is just starting now. How about it?" asked Bill.

"Sure," Dick said. He might as well go; might as well be one place as another.

Hailing a taxi, Everett said: "Zelli's."

Dick had heard of Zelli's. He would be glad to see it. How glaring the lights! As they entered, Zelli welcomed them.

"The royal box for Mr. Everett!"

A waiter led them to a table on the raised platform around the dance floor. There was a velvet seat against the wall.

Wild jazz music... American negroes. The place was jammed. Some people in evening dress; girls in little cloche hats with their cheeks close to their partners'. There were blinding lights, champagne, jazz.

That's the idea of those girls dancing together? Dick asked. "Oh, they hang out here and haven't landed any one yet. They dance to show themselves. Watch. They'll try to catch our eyes and hope we will ask them to sit down. I'll bet half of those girls haven't had their supper. If you ask them to sit down, the first thing they ask for is poulet. There're some pretty good kids among them, though. At least they're honest about their profession."

As they sat and watched the dancers Dick's eye fell on a tall, dark girl, dancing with a bright-eyed little girl. The smaller had her hair drawn very smooth and tight over her head and bound in a knot on the nape of her neck.

"Pretty little thing," Dick remarked. That smooth head reminded him of Enid's.

Bill Everett was delighted when he saw him speak of a girl whom he could ask to his table.

The two girls came over and sat down, the big one by Everett, the little one curled up on the velvet seat by Dick.

No, they hadn't had supper. Yes, they would enjoy some champagne and poulet.

They danced, they laughed. The little one's name was Marcel. She knew a little English. Yes, she had learned it during the war. Dick thought her face became a little sad at the mention of the war.

Bill glanced at his watch and said to Dick: "You're in good hands now, Dick. I'll be running along. I have to go out early with the Ambassador tomorrow."

Dick made a move to go—but why go? This wasn't bad. Marcel was a cute girl. He'd stay a while. He was beginning to feel that, after all, some life was left in him. Sure he'd stay.

"We'll dance, Mister Dick?" asked Marcel. Bill Everett had left, and her comrade had gone in search of further possibilities.

Dick nodded. As they danced Marcel nudged up to him and rested her little head on his broad chest. Kind of cozy to be holding her like that. The music stopped, and they waited. When it started again he held her very close.

Back at their table, Marcel nestled by Dick's side and slipped her hand into his.

TAKE IT FROM DAD

By Frank H. Cheley

Fathers and Sons as Pals

"Dad, what's the matter—are we so different from other people in the way we live and do things?"

Every now and then I hit a snag that sets me just wondering. Last week at school I was made chairman of the committee to arrange for the annual father and son get-together. I got the gang together and told them I was counting on them to a man to be present and they just laughed at me and razzed me terribly and told me I might become cheer leader but that if I thought that I could drag them out to a dad's party I was plumb goofy. Why more than half of that bunch don't want a father and son banquet. They talk about the 'Old Gent,' the 'Governor,' and the 'Boss'—why I never think of you that way at all. We had an awfully good time last year and the year before and last Saturday the guys made all sorts of fun of me because I said I'd rather go to the football game with you than with the gang. Jimmy Craig said, 'Why do you want to always be dragging him around for, aren't you ever going to grow up?' Now why is it, Dad, that some fathers and sons pal together and others do not?"

"I've thought of that very thing myself, Bob, a very great deal, long before you did, kid. Did it ever occur to you that the fine understanding, congenial friendship which we enjoy and have these many years didn't just happen?"

"Why no, Dad, what do you mean?"

"Why, I mean, my boy, that sympathy and understanding between folks, that mutual regard of one person for another, even of father for son or son for father never just happens. It has to grow and develop and be carefully cultivated. Fine fellowship between folks is the result of constantly doing things together. Why do you especially like Henry and Chub? Why because you are constantly doing interesting things together. If Henry and Chub just came here week in and week out and sat around you'd soon get tired of one another or even irritable with one another."

"It is a strange and pathetic thing, Bob, that so few fathers, wise and capable in their business and professions, have never discovered that simple fact. There are thousands of dads who while they provide food and clothes and home and school and cash for growing boys, never know them as we know each other because they never do anything together except criticize each other."

"All these years that you have been growing along I've planned things for us to do together Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. We've grown up together in a natural way. I have come to understand and appreciate you and have great dreams for you. You have never been afraid of me; have had confidence in my judgment and have played ball with me in our plans for home and Mother in a way which brings me very great personal satisfaction and, Son, it is because there is no false modesty between us that we have always been able to talk things over freely and frankly."

"I hope with all my heart that nothing will ever happen to destroy that fine fellowship. In no way at all have I sought to dominate you or make your decisions for you. Always have I given you all the liberty you could stand, and sometimes more, in my efforts to have you become a self-providing individual. It tickles me to death to see you step into responsibility and know that you are ambitious to do something and be something beyond the ordinary, and beyond what your Dad has been able to accomplish."

"Bob, every real dad who is working at the dad business is eager and anxious to be a pal to his boy. Many times he does not know how and many times the son makes it doubly difficult. The dad of one of your pals told me only the other day that he constantly had to deal with his son 'with gloves on,' he was so touchy. Thank goodness we get on as men to men. I'm sure you need my older judgment and encouragement and expectancy and I know I need your pep and enthusiasm and boundless energy."

"It's mighty difficult in the modern mad race for money and things to take time to live a bit with our children. We haven't got as much worldly goods as some of our neighbors; our car is of a more modest make and we don't 'belong' as much as some we know, but, boy, we have each other in mutual regard and all the money in the city couldn't buy that from either of us. Let's keep on doing things together."

"Boy, I want to make that Canadian canoe trip with you. I want to hunt a little big game in Alaska with you. I want to take some extension courses while you are in college. I want to help you build that first home of yours. Yes, Bob, I want to help you raise a son that will bring you as much joy as you have brought me. So, let's shake again. That's it! What do we care what the kang says. When is this Father and Son banquet to be? I believe I could almost make a speech?"

DAIRY TALES

SUITABLE CROPS ON DAIRY FARMS

Corn, Alfalfa and Pasture Grass Most Suitable.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Corn, alfalfa, and pasture grass have proved to be the most profitable crops grown on the dairy experiment farm operated at Beltsville, Md., by the United States Department of Agriculture. The bureau of dairy industry uses a six-year rotation, three years alfalfa and three years corn. The pasture is comparatively permanent and does not enter into the rotation except at intervals.

T. E. Woodward, in outlining the rotation, says: "In changing from corn to alfalfa the ground is manured in the fall after the crop is removed for silage. The land is then plowed and left in the rough to allow pulverization by freezing. The alfalfa is sown about the first of April and produces two small cuttings the first year."

"In changing from alfalfa to corn the first cutting of alfalfa is removed the latter part of May, the ground is plowed, and corn is planted for silage. Manure is applied for each crop of corn except the one following the alfalfa, and in summer, when it cannot be used on the corn or alfalfa, it is placed on the pastures. Lime is applied every six years previous to sowing the alfalfa."

A mixture of six pounds of orchard grass, four of timothy, three or red-top, four of bluegrass, four of red clover, and two of alsike, sowed about April 1 on land that has been fall plowed and manured, provides pasture about June. If the first crop of newly sown alfalfa is weedy it is made into hay, but instead of giving it barn space it is stacked in the pasture, which is fenced so cows can eat it when pastures are short and dry.

Send Culled Spuds to Market in Cream Cans

Minnesota creameries will pay fair prices this fall for culled potatoes, providing they are first fed to cows and converted into dairy products. Careful analyses show that, pound for pound, potatoes have about the same feeding value as ordinary silage. Silage has 17.7 pounds of total digestible nutrients in a 100 pounds, while potatoes have 17.1 pounds.

Dr. C. H. Eckles, chief of the dairy division, university farm, St. Paul, warns against over-feeding potatoes, since it has been found that 20 to 25 pounds daily per cow are about all that can be fed to advantage. Where it is feasible to cook the potatoes, this is a good plan and cooked potatoes may be fed up to 30 or 35 pounds a day. Greater amounts result in giving the milk and butter a poor flavor and may cause indigestion.

Produce Clean Milk

According to M. J. Prucha of the University of Illinois in his recent bulletin issued by the University of Illinois College of Agricultural experiment station, the three most essential points in producing milk of low bacterial count are: The animal must be clean and free from dirt. The utensils that come in contact with the milk must be properly sterilized. The milk must be promptly cooled to a temperature of 60 degrees Fahrenheit.

Dairy Notes

Feeding dairy cows according to the amount of milk they produce is a profitable practice.

Silage made from corn fodder is not nearly so sour. It has a pleasant sweet smell, and the cows will like it and do well on it.

Entirely dry fodder will make good silage, but the water added should equal the fodder by weight. It should be tramped down thoroughly.

The best dairymen watch their cows very closely, weigh and test the milk, and feed each cow according to her capacity to respond to feeding.

Home-grown feed, good management, and cows bred for production is the combination that many are using in making profits from small herds.

Fodder silage not only makes better feed than dry fodder, but it is also more convenient to feed. Even though the corn fodder appears dry and wilted, the stalk will contain considerable moisture.

Icy water temporarily checks digestion, and for an hour or more will cause the cows to shiver. Such conditions decrease the milk flow because they interfere with the cow's digestive processes which must function properly in order to produce milk in maximum quantities.

If there is not enough moisture in the corn to pack the corn well in the silo, then additional water should be added. This water should be added to the fan box. In this way the fan thoroughly distributes the additional water.

35 HI-Y BOYS CANVASS CITY FOR PUBLIC RINKS FUNDS

FOUNDATION FOR PUBLIC RINK IN PARK COMPLETED; SKATING EXPECTED SOON

BOYS TO VISIT HOUSES IN CITY TODAY AND TOMORROW FOR SUBSCRIPTIONS

Thirty-five Hi-Y boys started out today to canvass the city for funds for the maintenance of public skating rinks in the city of Brainerd.

The drive for funds will be continued tomorrow. It is hoped that the city will be covered by tomorrow evening. The objective set is $800.

Donations to the fund will be recognized in the columns of the Brainerd Daily Dispatch.

Due to the rise in temperature of the past week the start of skating on the Gregory Park rink has been delayed. The foundation for the rink has been completed and skating will be in full swing there shortly. Later a hockey league will be organized.

FOUR OUTSTANDING CAGE RULE CHANGES SINCE HOME GAMES

DRIBBLING OF BALL DISCOURAGED BY NEW RULES NOW EFFECTIVE

MORE ALLOWANCE GIVEN MAN WHO RECEIVES BALL ON DEAD RUN

Four outstanding rules changes have come into effect since Brainerd was last privileged to have a gymnasium of its own, so for the benefit of fans that they might better understand the rulings of officials, Coach Warren Kasch today urged that the following rules be stressed:

To discourage dribbling as much as possible, thus making the game a strictly passing out, the blame in body contact between a dribbler and the attacking party will be placed on the dribbler.

On a jump ball, the men jumping cannot touch the ball until it has been touched by someone else or it has touched the floor. Infringement of this rule makes the ball out of bounds with the opponent taking it.

ATTENDANCE IN 3 YEARS RAN TO 15 MILLION FANS

AMERICAN PUBLIC MORE AND MORE INTERESTED IN ALL SPORTS

LEAGUE LOOKS CONFIDENTLY TO 1930 AS ANOTHER GREAT YEAR

By JOHN F. HEYDLE
President National Baseball League (Written for the United Press)

New York, Jan. 3.—With the last three years the best in National League history in attendance, aggregating as they did a total attendance of about 15,000,000, and with the American public more and more interested in all sports, our league naturally looks forward with confidence to 1930 as another great year.

Last year, for the first time in six years, our race was practically decided by September 1. We do not expect such a runaway or one-sided race this year for the reason that our league appears to be much better balanced than it was at the beginning of last season.

The Boston and Cincinnati clubs, under new managers, should be much stronger from the start, as these teams developed strength towards the end of last season and have added helpful playing material.

And the improvement of the Philadelphia club should be a feature of the next race, as this team had just begun to show its real power in the last months of play. We should therefore have three second division teams to give battle to the leaders from the start.

If the internal dissension in some of our clubs can be ironed out before the start of the season our league will have every reason to begin the 1930 pennant race in high confidence that it will be the best in interest, attendance and keen competition we have ever known.

All Hail King Leo!

By HARDIN BURNLEY.

LEO HAS ESTABLISHED HIS SUPREMACY AMONG THE PROFESSIONALS BY TWO STRAIGHT P.G.A. VICTORIES!

GOLFING has long conceded Caliente tournament this month. Leo Diegel to be one of its greatest players, despite his unorthodox putting stance and nervous erraticisms which every now and then ruin his game. In match play Diegel seems to be supreme, his successful defense of the American Professional Golfers' Association championship last December again demonstrating that fact. Thirty-six hole duels are Diegel's forte. In the recent P. G. A. championship he beat Walter Hagen in the semi-final round, and the next day did likewise to Johnny Farrell.

Thus does King Leo retain our professional golfers' crown and loom mightily as the probable winner of the great $25,000 Agua Caliente tournament this month. The first prize there is $10,000 and King Leo is the Agua Caliente Club's pro. He knows its links and grandpa does those in his heavy watch chain. It should take a Horton Smith or a Bill Melhorn in the full flush of their topmost form to even hope to prevent his Professional Golfing Majesty from annexing that ten grand prize on his own home course. Like with Bobby Jones in a National Amateur, it will be the field against Diegel during that rich Mexican event.

With the U. S. Ryder Cup team when abroad last Spring, Diegel got "hot" but for one spell and then he certainly dazzled the most august of English and Scotch golf critics. During that brief but brilliant run, Leo putted so beautifully from his nervous, cramped stance that the British termed his style "diegling."

It is in our Professional Championship play that Diegel dons his royal raiment and seems to wave magic wands. Instead of clubs, so profusely do birds and eagles swoop from his vast variety of swings, putts, etc. In 1928, King Leo defeated Hagen, Sarazen, and Espinosa on successive days. Preliminary to his recent re-coronation, Diegel repeated with Sarazen, Hagen and Farrell as the victims of Leo's under-par play. Verily, Diegel would seem to be the king of all individual match players, year in and year out.

King Leo also rules the Canadian opens, having won that title four times.

Searchers Brave Death in Icy Wastes

Siberian wastes and waters that have for a month and a half concealed the fate of Carl Ben Eielson and Earl Borland, Arctic fliers, will be thoroughly searched by the Coast Guard Cutter Chelan, pictured above (as seen from the air), bound for Seward, Alaska. On the first lap of the search for the missing fliers, the carrying three airplanes which will fly over the icy waste

(Lower) Miss Adeline Eielson clasping the hand of Captain "Pat" Reid, and wishing him god-speed in his search for her missing brother. (International Newsreel)

BEHIND the grey veil of the Northern mists right into the heart of an Arctic Winter, airmen are preparing to battle the elements in their search for the lost flier Carl Eielson, who together with his mechanic, Earl Borland, has been missing in the Siberian region of North Cape since November 9. Eielson, who is head of Alaska Airways, took off in a Hamilton all-metal plane to fly to the rescue of the trading ship Nanuk, reported icebound in the desolate North Cape region. The vessel carried a cargo of valuable furs.

Since November 9, Eielson and his companion have vanished into the silence of the Siberian ice fields. His plane was provisioned for thirty days, but rescue parties are hopeful that the two men are still alive. And so for the first time airmen are to risk the hazards of Winter flying over the Arctic basin, where the temperature is already 94 degrees below zero, in their errand of mercy. United States airmen must await the arrival of planes before they can start their search. It is thought best that the planes be rushed direct by air. The Aviation Corporation of Canada is taking part in the search and has announced that it will spare no expense and endeavor to overcome every obstacle to successfully carry out the search. The party is headed by Captain Oakes with the famous pilot T. M. "Pat" Reid acting as flight commander. Three Fairchild monoplanes will be used, each fitted with full Canadian Winter flying equipment. The expedition is very hopeful and consider it a good sign that they have reached Fairbanks, Alaska, a full week ahead of their tentative schedule. The Soviet Government in answer to the appeal of Senator Borah addressed to Maxim Litvinov, Acting Commissar of Foreign Affairs at Moscow, will equip and send out their own search party. Semyon Shastakov, who made the successful flight from Moscow to New York, will head the rescue squad and will pilot a plane of the same type as the Land of the Soviets, which was used for the flight. Dog sled parties are also being assembled at Yakutsk to aid in the land search. Eielson is the gallant flier, who, together with Sir Hubert Wilkins, flew over the Arctic. He was the best friend of the late Floyd Bennett, pioneer Arctic flier. (International Newsreel)

FALL PIGS GIVEN CAREFUL FEEDING

Forage Crop Suggested for Young Porkers.

The farmer who wants to make a success of his pigs must pay careful attention to proper feedings and handling, says the New York State College of Agriculture. Corn is a favorite high energy feed.

It is suggested that pigs be allowed to run on a forage crop after weaning to give them a better start toward the long winter months. During the growing and fattening periods, the concentrates fed should be of high energy value with some protein supplement, or a combination of protein supplements. Although corn is probably best, ground barley or ground rye may be substituted for corn. In using these feeds, farmers should remember that they are high in energy but low in protein, and that they must be balanced with high protein foods in order to get the best results. Skim milk or buttermilk, both of which are high in protein and mineral matter, are good to balance grains. About two and one-half to three pounds of milk should be fed with one pound of corn for fifty-pound pigs. As the animals grow the amount of milk may be correspondingly decreased.

Such feeds as tankage, fish meal, alfalfa meal, and oil meal, should be fed where skim milk or buttermilk is not available. In the Middle West a combination of 50 per cent fish meal, 25 per cent alfalfa meal, and 25 per cent oil meal has been used with corn or other feeds to start the pigs. About 15 to 20 per cent of the protein supplement should be fed in the beginning, and gradually decreased until at the finishing period only about 5 per cent is fed.

Nicotine or Sulphate

Treatment for Worms

In treating sheep for stomach worms, either copper sulphate or nicotine sulphate should be used. The copper sulphate treatment: Dissolve one-fourth pound of the powdered sulphate (bluestone) in one pint of boiling water, using an enamelware dish, as the bluestone corrodes most metals. Then add enough cold water to make the solution up to three gallons, using wooden, earthenware or other non-metallic receptacles. This will make approximately a 1 per cent solution and will be enough to dose 100 adult sheep, allowing 10 per cent waste. In the preparation of the dose use only clear, blue crystals of copper sulphate. Crush the crystals to a fine powder when ready to make up the solution.

Have the solution the right strength. An overdose may kill the sheep while less than the amount recommended may not kill the worms. Use only the pure blue crystals, not bluestone which has become white and powdery.

Bighead Is Incurable

Derangement of Horse

In some parts of the United States a peculiar disease of horses, known as bighead, occurs. The bones become soft and spongy in the latter stage of the disease.

One of the first symptoms is a stiffness in gait or a decided lameness, usually in one or both hind legs. Close examination reveals a thickening or enlargement of the bones of the face, especially of the branches of the lower jaw.

There is danger that the horse will fracture the bones during muscular exertion. The disease is incurable. In the good old horse trading days a horse with bighead usually had many masters before he died.

Alfalfa makes a good hog pasture though it will not produce the first season and it demands a sweet soil.

Fall pigs demand the best of attention to feeding and handling if they are to be profitable to the grower.

Profits in the stock business are generally made by good feeding. "Good feeding" is supplying the animal with its required food elements at a low cost, or with profit.

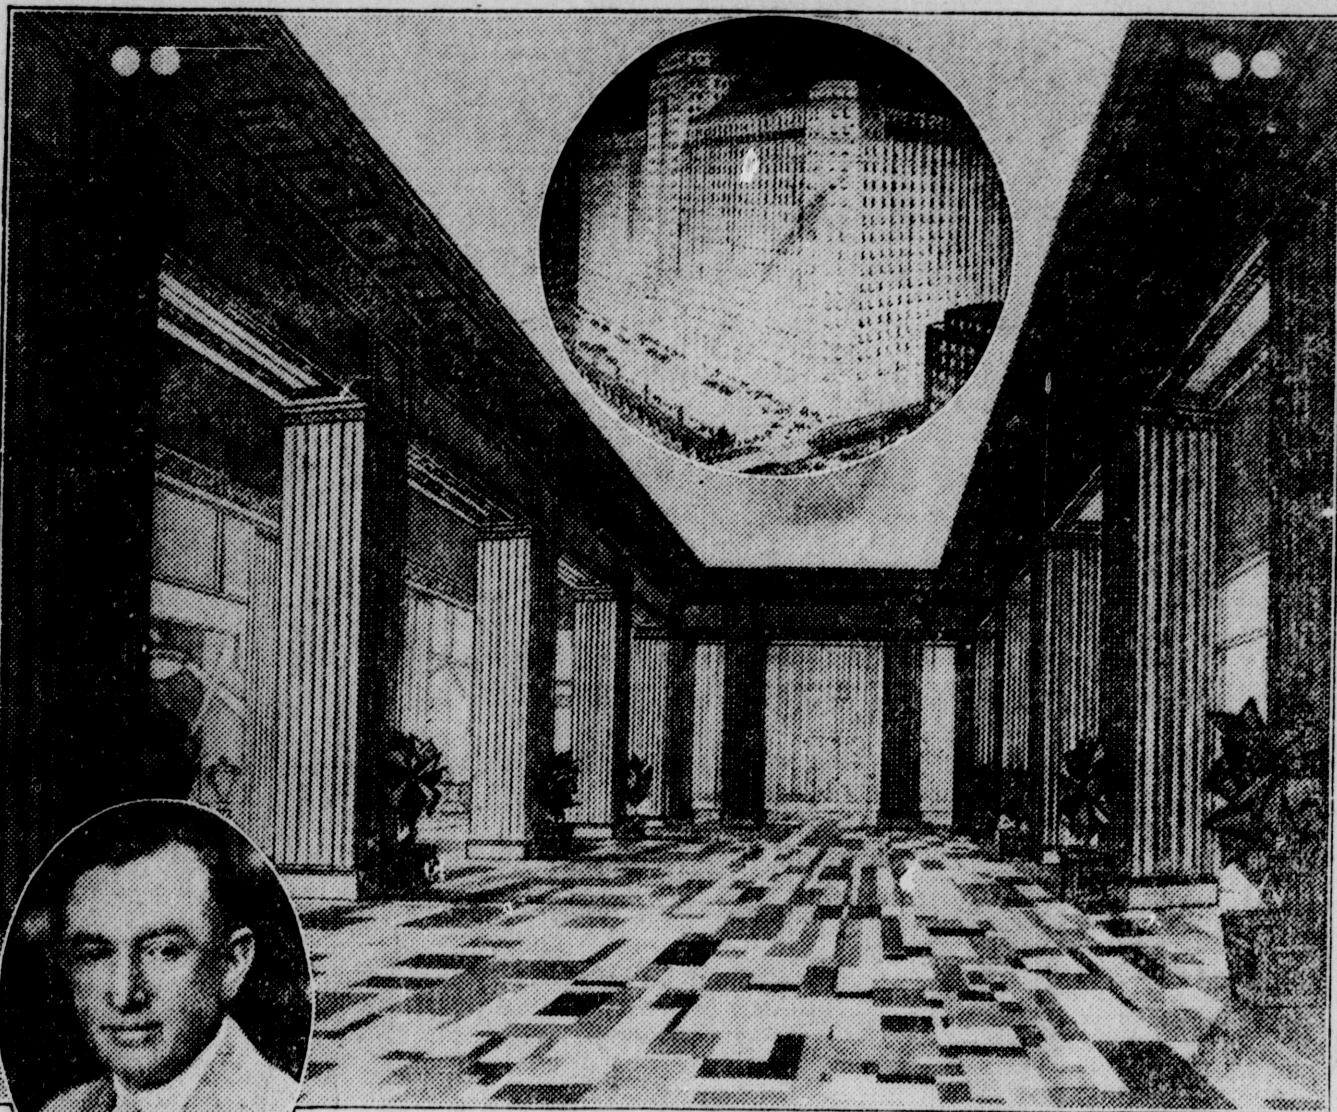

One eight to twelve months old boar should satisfactorily take care of the 18 gilts provided he is not allowed to run with the gilts and is not mated with more than an average of one sow per day.

Silage or roots furnish cheap feed and are especially useful in keeping ewes in good condition during the winter.

Up until the age of seven years mares are worth more than geldings; after the age of seven, geldings are worth more than mares.

Barley and whey, fed at the Wisconsin experiment station to fattening hogs, gave a daily gain of 2.2 pounds, while barley and tankage gave a daily gain of 1.6 pounds.

Feed a Town's Population Each Day in the World's Biggest Building

Great 650-foot modernistic grand lobby of the Chicago Merchandise Mart in which the world's biggest restaurant will be located. Inserts show Mart as it will look when completed, and Andrew C. Weisburg who will operate restaurant.

Chicago Merchandise Mart to Have Most Novel Restaurant in America to Cater to the World's Appetites

THE world's largest restaurant, with an international menu and accommodations for a whole town's population of diners, will be located in the Chicago Merchandise Mart, the world's biggest building. There will be seating accommodations for 1,400 people at a time and it is estimated that it will be possible to feed 10,000 a day. More than 30,000 square feet of space in the Mart's grand lobby, divided into four units, have been reserved for restaurant facilities. There will be many unique features of equipment and service and a roster of more than 500 employees.

On one side of the great 650-foot grand lobby will be the men's grill and a general dining room for men and women. Opposite these will be a coffee shop and lunch counter room and grill. These will be grouped about a huge kitchen in the center, enclosed by glass. It will be a visible kitchen so that the patrons, no matter in which of the restaurants they are eating, will be able to see the food prepared.

This is the first time in America, according to Andrew C. Weisburg, who has secured the restaurant rights, that the problem of preparing food in a mammoth restaurant in a manner which will absolutely insure cleanliness and sanitation will be solved. At all times the food handling and preparing operations of the restaurants will be the subject of scrutiny by the patrons.

Mr. Weisburg, owner of the Hotel Oliver, South Bend, Indiana, is a nationally known hotel and restaurant man. He is now touring Europe and the Orient in search of new ideas for equipment and service and to acquaint himself with the favorite foods of other nations, that he may be able to cater to the palates of visitors from abroad, as well as the American business man, when the Mart opens in May to the merchant buyers of the world.

The Mart will have a total floor area of 4,000,000 square feet of about 100 acres, and a display space on each floor of 250,000 square feet, or around five acres. Each of the 18 display floors of the 24-story structure, two city blocks in length, will have sales corridors 650 feet long, veritable "business boulevards." Bordering on these great corridors will be hundreds of lines of merchandise exhibited through stores having six and one-half miles of window display.

Bringing the buyer to a great central market instead of taking the merchandise to the merchant is the merchandising principle of which the Mart stands as an institution, and this plan of concentrated markets means a new era in more economical and efficient distribution of merchandise for the manufacturer and wholesaler and less time in buying to give more time for selling to the merchant buyers of the country, declared Mr. Welles.

Although no padlocks will be placed on the doors, the keys were taken out of the rack in the lobby and the rooms ordered kept vacant.

HUSBAND FORCED WIFE TO RIDE 11 MILES ON HORSEBACK

Chicago, Jan. 3.—(U.P.)—A husband who forces his wife to ride 11 miles on horseback, when she is not used to riding, is downright cruel. Mrs. Ella Blohm Sage contended in her suit for divorce.

When she married William C. Sage in 1928, she thought he was a mining engineer but when he took her to Peru she learned he was a professional gambler, the wife charged. She declared the Peru trip was a nightmare for her because, in addition to the horseback ride, she suffered hardships on a two-day trip across a desert and was terrified when Sage made her cross a narrow swaying bridge 1,500 feet above a canyon.

"He abandoned me in an Indian camp and then was put in jail," Mrs. Sage declared.

Woman's Chief Charms

Not to Be Purchased

The mouth is a photograph of the disposition. Some one has said that we are not responsible for the disposition we are born with, but we are responsible for the one that we die with. It is the same with the mouth. The sweetness and kissableness and dearness of a baby's mouth are not dependent on the shape or size. Baby's mouth is sweet because his soul is sweet. No brand of lipstick, nor any artist in its use, can camouflage a sour mouth and make even a casual observer believe it is sweet.

Then there is the eye, which the contents of the vanity case cannot change. "The eye is the window of the soul." You can buy something that will lengthen the fringe on the curtains to your soul-windows, you can change the cut of the lambrequins above, but you can't keep people from looking in sometimes, unless you pull the shades down altogether and put yourself in darkness. No vanity case, not even a whole drug store or beauty shop, can make attractive the windows out of which looks a quarrelsome, envious soul.

Keep sweet within, if you want to get full value from your vanity case. —Nellie S. Russell in the Farm Journal.

TRIBUTE TO OLD YEAR

Ladies of "Golden Pete Bank Brigade"
Meet With Mrs.
E. P. Slipp

A worthy tribute to the memory of the old year was the interesting and profitable meeting held Tuesday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. E. P. Slipp, when ladies of the "Golden Pete Bank Brigade" assembled in the interest of the work of lepers. Previous to the carrying out of the afternoon's program business matters, relative to the disbursing of former money received, were taken up, at which Mrs. R. L. Geist and Mrs. R. J. Hartley took part.

A communication to Mrs. Slipp from Miss Kate Whiteley, Grand Forks, N. D., was noted and in which Miss Whiteley enclosed a check of $25 to be sent to Miss Emily Hartwell, Congregational missionary at Poochow, China. Miss Whiteley writes, "I have a feeling that Miss Hartwell, now an old lady in the midst of present tragic conditions in China, must need money, and because you have sent her money before I am asking you to send her the enclosed $25, as a Christmas gift, from me." This money will be forwarded to Miss Hartwell through the treasury of the Followers of the Glean.

The program prepared by The American Mission to Lepers in New York, was carried out as follows: Congregational singing.

What a Friend we Have in Jesus (a version written for the lepers)—Mrs. W. A. M. Johnstone at the piano. Scripture reading, Mark 1:40-44, Matt. 10:5-8, Matt. 11:1-5—Mrs. E. P. Slipp, with a prayer for the lepers, followed by the Lord's prayer in unison.

Poem, "On the Shore" (illustrating Christ who healed the lepers when here on earth, is still the Healer—Miss Lillian Peterson).

The story of "Wilbur and Pete" was reviewed by Mrs. Slipp.

A duet, "He Cares for Us"—Sung by the Misses Ethel and Lillian Peterson. (The composer of both words and music was a leper patient in Hospital 66, Carville, La.)

"How Certain Lepers Obtained a Church"—Mrs. Carmichael.

"Why Chiangmai Lepers Ran Away"—Mrs. Evans.

The program closed with attention being called to "Togetherness," by a Leper Mission worker, and in which was stated: "If there is anything on this earth absolutely in line with the spirit of our blessed Master it is the work for lepers and in which Christian people from all sorts of ecclesiastical organizations without competition and loyal to Him, are as one facing this missionary task that can be done effectively and completely only as it is done cooperatively."

Before repairing to an adjoining room where the making of leper bandages was completed, Mrs. Geist read "The Other Four." It was shown at the hospital in Korea for whom there was "no money no room" for the "Other Four" lepers, $40 a year would maintain a leper at the station, thus clothing him, giving him food, buying his medicine and providing the life restoring medical care which a leper so sorely needs, and gives the Gospel message.

A letter from Miss May Whiteley enclosed funds for leper work and she stated that she, Kate Whiteley and Mrs. Louis Yager, St. Paul, were each going to send $40 to this hospital in Korea and admit one new patient each. Refreshments were served by the hostess, Miss Lillian Peterson assisting. A collection for the work for lepers was received.

Lauds Ordinance Such as Brainerd
Has Requiring Testing of Milk

A review of the work of the Minnesota State Livestock Sanitary Board and their accomplishments for the protection of the people of Minnesota in dairy and stock products was given by Dr. H. G. McGinn at the Lions club meeting last evening.

Dr. McGinn maintains his residence at Brainerd conducting his work from St. Paul. He is assistant veterinarian to the state veterinarian of the board.

The speaker told of the composition of the livestock board, the duties and powers of the members. He gave statistics showing the wealth of the dairy and stock industry in the state as compared to other states, Minnesota ranking fifth.

Dr. McGinn explained the various diseases of cattle particularly those affecting humans and the methods and results of the state to eradicate contagious and infectious diseases among stock that would be detrimental to human life. He told of the work the state is accomplishing in stamping out tubercular cows.

One of the recognized causes of tuberculosis in children is from milk of cows infected with T. B. The state is materially improving the situation, he said.

Ordinances requiring the testing of milk for local consumption such as the one Brainerd has in effect provide protection to the consumer, Dr. McGinn said.

The Brainerd ordinance was passed by the city council in April 1921 and has been in force since August 1921.

The DAIRY

CONTROL GARLIC BY FALL PLOWING

Keep Plants Down by Grazing Live Stock.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Timely plowing late each fall and again early in the spring, followed by the growing of thoroughly cultivated row crops, are the essential steps in the so-called cultural method of controlling wild garlic, says the United States Department of Agriculture. In most places this system must be followed for at least three years in order to obtain a satisfactory clean-up of the weed.

Details of the method are given in Leaflet 43-L, Wild Garlic and Its Control, just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. The leaflet also gives a description of the plant and of other plants often mistaken for garlic. Farmers should be able to recognize wild garlic, the department says, as it is more difficult to eradicate than the other species.

Grazing with live stock, especially sheep, for several seasons, as closely as may be safe without serious injury to the pasture, aids in keeping down the growth of garlic in steep, rocky or wooded pastures that cannot be plowed. When dairy cows are pastured in garlicy fields, it is necessary to remove them from the pasture four to seven hours before milking to eliminate entirely the garlic flavor and odor from the milk. Milk cows should not be turned into such pastures in the spring until suitable forage plants are large enough to furnish good grazing.

Copies of the leaflet may be obtained free while the supply lasts by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Bad Practice to Leave

Calf With Cow Very Long

A common practice is to leave the calf with the cow for the first three or four days. This plan allows the calf to be with the cow during the time when the udder is inflamed. However, the longer the calf is allowed to remain with the cow, the harder it will be to teach it to drink. If at first a calf does not drink readily from a pail, it is advisable to keep it without food for at least 12 hours. It is then hungry and is usually willing to try drinking. Warm whole milk, fresh from the cow, should be measured or preferably weighed into a clean pail. The quantity of milk that a calf will do well on varies according to the size, breed and individuality of the calf. In general, for Jersey or Guernsey calves, one pound of milk daily for each ten pounds of live weight is a safe quantity. Ayrshire, Holstein, Brown Swiss and Shorthorn calves may be fed one pound of milk a day for each eight pounds of live weight.

Skim Milk Calf

The skim milk calf should be allowed to eat some grain. One good mixture consists of equal parts of corn meal, wheat bran, and ground oats. If the oats are not available a mixture of equal parts of corn meal and wheat bran may be used. A Jersey calf at three months of age should weigh in the neighborhood of 150 pounds and should eat one pound of grain. By the time it is six months old its weight should be around 300 pounds.

Dairy Facts

Sentimental regard for a bull is usually misplaced.

Every farmer who milks ten or more cows can hardly afford to be without a silo.

Every dairy farmer should provide in his crop rotation some of the legume hay crops.

Where nonlegume roughages are used in the ration, the protein is low and must be furnished in the grain ration.

Experimental results show that milk and fat can be produced at a lower cost where silage is included in the winter ration.

Dried blood meal, mixed with the milk, also helps when a calf is sickly or inclined to scour. Start with one teaspoonful and increase to four teaspoonfuls, if found necessary.

In cold, stormy weather dairy cows should be outdoors only long enough to drink, and if the stable is comfortable and water available they should not go out at all except on clear, warm days.

The dry roughage part of the ration includes legumes and other hay crops. Alfalfa, clover, soy bean and cowpea hay represent the best dry roughages that can be fed, because they are high in protein. When these crops are grown on the farm they provide the cheapest protein that can be fed.
